

Hilary (second left) with some of the successful Excel students who made it into Qatar Airways.

Realise the dream to fly high

THOSE aspiring to make a career out of flying and do not want to be disappointed at job interviews should check out the Flight Attendant Preparatory Course.

Conducted by Inter-Excel Advisory Sdn Bhd, a leading airline training and placement centre, the 2-month course is specially designed to teach potential candidates the finer points of being a flight attendant such as in-flight responsibilities, communication skills, airline terminologies and et cetera.

The main objective of this course is to train candidates to meet the criteria emphasised by the various airlines. Students will undergo a mock interview at the end of the course in which the panel will assess their weakness and strong points.

'Aim high to travel far' - that's one tagline which aspiring pilots, air stewards or stewardesses will live by.

As Inter-Excel director Hilary Miranda said: "The airlines industry is one that never dies."

Today, the parent company doubles as a training centre for cabin crew and also operates as a major airline placement centre. Inter-Excel is proud to be officially appointed as cabin crew interview organiser for various international airlines such as Etihad Airways, Oman Air and Sudan Airways among others.

Lucrative salary awaits those who aspire to travel in style and serve passengers onboard.

The selection criteria are so stringent that only the best can make it. Some of the common reasons cited for failing are lacking in interpersonal skills, general knowledge and confidence, ill manners, over-confidence and simply not having the right attitude and image.

Malaysians are often sought after in the airlines industry because of their language skills and the qualities they possess.

"Coming from a multi-cultural background with traditional values inculcated from young has taught us to accept people for who they are" added Hilary.

Nowadays, airlines are no longer looking for mere beauty but rather, someone with an appropriate personality, service oriented and having the ability to project their true selves.

The pay of a flight attendant can be very lucrative while on-the-job experience prepares them for future career in the service industry and business.

Visit us at our booth, J16, at the Star Education Fair in PISA, Penang.

For further enquiries, please call Chong Siew Fong at 016-2850339 or visit our website, www.excelmalaysia.com.

Take the first steps towards realising your dream and aspiration of becoming a successful airline crew now!